

5. If you are to start a software company, name 2 people from your batch whom you will choose as your partner and why?

If I am to choose 2 people for any sort of entrepreneurship venture then there are certain qualities that I would like them to have. Firstly, I would expect them to have the necessary skills and expertise in the particular domain, which in this case is a software company. Therefore, they should be well aware of the latest technology and trends and functionalities to the related domain. Hence, they will bring to the table the necessary resources for our company to sustain in this cut-throat competitive market. This would help us in the long term to plan, grow and run our company. It is also important that my partners should share the similar values, vision and spirit which is necessary for the success of any new enterprise in today's market. He/she should be able to communicate freely and effectively to make better and wise decisions, set realistic goals and take our company to new heights. Another important aspect while selecting my partners will be that both should be financially independent or stable. As we all know, money, assets and time management are critical for small business entrepreneurs. Keeping all these in mind, it is important to choose someone who won't mismanage finances and endowed with skills and discipline to make a business successful. It may even lead to money theft etc. Considering all the points mentioned above, I would like to choose Pradeep and Sneham. This is also because none of them are my close friends but at the same time we can cordially work with each other with utmost professionalism and I believe it is important to avoid getting into a business with someone we are emotionally involved with, as it will cloud our decisions etc.
